

MARSE HENRY WATTERSON DIES SUDDENLY IN SOUTH

America's Greatest Living Journalist Passes Away Suddenly In Florida Early Thursday

(By Associated Press)
Louisville, Fla., Dec. 22.—Marse Henry Watterson, one of the country's best known journalists, publisher and publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, died at a local hotel at 8:45 this morning.

Mr. Watterson's death was unexpected, though it had been for some days that he was ill. The veteran publisher had been about six weeks in the hospital. He has for years been suffering from the winter largely at Myers. It was his intention to go to that place when the weather improved sufficiently to make the trip.

His wife, son and daughter were at his bedside when he died. Watterson's death was due to a rupture, superinduced by congestion of the lungs. Thirty minutes before his death he called his wife into the room and kissed her. His son and daughter were summoned, whereupon his death was peaceful. Colonel Watterson having lapsed into unconsciousness again a few minutes before his death.

He was among the last survivors of the old school of journalism and was known affectionately to friends as "Marse Henry." He contracted a slight cold Thursday and while seated in a chair yesterday soon after he suffered an acute bronchitis attack and was ordered to bed by his physician. His condition grew worse during the day and night and he died early today.

Mr. Watterson, who passed away at "Marse Henry's" home, where he had lived for many years, was a member of the Confederate army. He was the "home blue flag" and was flying "Dixie" on parade and pretty girls would be shouting the "Chattanooga" to groups of ragged, red-nosed angels who have not forgotten the rebel yell.

Mr. Watterson's "Chattanooga Rebel" was a paper he published during the war. He was here in the spring when it was taken to Louisville for burial. Watterson is said to have thought it inadvisable to return during the winter.

Henry Watterson was one of the old time personal journalists. More than half a century his editorials, with their plain, original and phrase-making composition, attracted wide attention. They were commented on and copied by the press of the nation. Besides his power in leading public opinion through editorials, Watterson's influence was credited with having shaped the platform of the Democratic party in more than one presidential campaign.

It was perhaps through an accident that Henry Watterson possessed journalism. Early in life he evinced unusual musical talent and his parents encouraged it. A ship that crashed his left hand, leaving that member stiff, caused the musical education to be abandoned, as the piano was his favorite instrument.

A natural bent for writing developed by text in this Mr. Watterson was seriously handicapped at an illness in infancy had affected his vision. His first journalistic experience was gained on Washington, D. C., newspaper. His musical and dramatic criticism, under the name of M. Watterson, for twenty years preceding the outbreak of the war between the States, was a representative in Congress from Tennessee. It was during this time that Henry Watterson laid the foundations for an elaborate knowledge of national affairs, he spending much of his time associating with party leaders of that time and in close contact with the operation of the government.

Watterson's course in letters and journalism in the national capital was interrupted just as he attained his majority by the outbreak of war. With his father, he opposed the secession movement, but upon the declaration of hostilities, he returned to his Tennessee home and joined the army of the confederacy. He served throughout the war, except for a period of ten months, when he established and operated at Chattanooga, Tenn., "The Rebel," a semi-military paper.

Mr. Watterson served first as an aide to the famous cavalry leader, General Nathan Bedford Forrest, and later was on the staff of General Lechidas Polk.

During the campaign between Generals Sherman and Johnston, Watterson was chief of scouts of the Confederate army. "The Rebel" instantly achieved great popularity. The paper was outspoken and independent, forecasting in many things the Louisville Courier-Journal, a lineal descendant to follow it within a few years.

Abraham Lincoln was said to be the great passion of Watterson's life. His lecture on "Lincoln" was delivered in hundreds of cities and it was his pride to tell of calling on Lincoln the morning of his inauguration and of standing beside him at the ceremony.

"Let no Southern man point his finger at me," Mr. Watterson said, "because I can point to Lincoln, for he was the one I and we had at court when friends were most in need."

When Watterson founded the Journal he made a plea for harmony in the South. Thoroughly reconstructed himself, he urged all to follow his course in complete submission to the Federal government.

Mr. Watterson always advocated a "Lullaby for Revenue Only," a phrase which he coined, and which finally was adopted by the Democratic party. He was an ardent friend of Grover Cleveland during the latter's first administration as president, but opposed Cleveland's third nomination.

His services as a public official were confined to a fractional term in Congress. He accepted a seat there in 1876-77 at the wishes of Samuel Tilden, with whom he was closely allied. Mr. Watterson refused re-nomination for the full term. Frequently urged to run for high office he always refused, maintaining:

"I shall stay where I am. Ofice is not for me. Beginning in slavery to end with poverty it is a journey to my sense of freedom."

From 1872 to 1892, however, he sat at all national conventions of the Democratic party as a delegate-at-large from Kentucky. He presided over the convention that nominated Tilden in 1876 and was chairman of the platform committee in those of 1880 and 1888.

Mr. Watterson opposed Wm. Jennings Bryan in his candidacy for president in 1896, but in 1900 the Courier-Journal gave him lukewarm support. In 1908, however, Mr. Watterson denominated as the "free silver heresy" being "as dead as African slavery" in the United States, he became a warm supporter of Bryan.

Mr. Watterson also devoted some of his editorial attention to social questions. He once made a savage attack on New York society women, calling them "a flock of unclean birds." He accused them of fondness for display that ruined the men, and of love of champagne and bridge.

His dashing style gave him the nicknames of "Light Horse Harry" and "Henry of Navarre." He was more popularly called plain "Marse Henry."

As effectively as he wrote Mr. Watterson spoke on the public platform. His reputation as an orator reached its climax when he delivered an address at the dedication of the Columbian Exposition when he appeared as the government's official spokesman.

Among the several books he wrote or compiled were "Oddities of Southern Life and Character," a volume of Southern humor; "The Spanish-American War," written concurrently with the events, and his latest work, "Compromises of Life," a compilation of his lectures, addresses and numerous editorials from the Courier-Journal.

Of his career, Mr. Watterson

"I came out of the war like many of the young fellows of the South, a very picked bird, indeed. In order to escape the humiliation of borrowing from a Northern uncle, whose politics I did not approve, I went with my watch to an 'uncle' who had no politics at all and got fifty dollars on it. Along with two blanket-mates, who were as poor as myself, I started, or rather revived, publication of an old suspended weekly newspaper at Nashville. Nothing could withstand the energy and ardor which we three threw into the enterprise. We were working for bread and had to have it. When we began there were nine daily papers struggling for a footing in the little Tennessee capital. At the end of the year there were but two, and of these ours had two-thirds of the business. After two years I was called to Louisville to take an editorial position on the old Louisville Journal, the paper of George D. Prentice. Six months later Walter N. Haldeman, who owned the Courier joined with me in combining the Journal and Courier. Incidentally this led to the purchase of the old Louisville Democrat, this publication losing its identity entirely. That is about all."

The consolidation of the three papers was the first of the great newspaper combinations. It resulted in the first appearance of the Courier-Journal, November 30, 1888. In his early years he supervised the detail of every department, and for more than thirty years "put the paper to press" every night.

He was born in Washington, D. C., on February 16, 1840. In 1918 Mr. Watterson sold his interest in the Courier-Journal to Judge Robert W. Bingham, a Louisville, who also purchased stock of other owners, and Watterson retired from editorial responsibility and place, except for several months the title of editor emeritus. In the spring of 1919, he resigned that position and since then he has been living a wholly retired life, interrupting only occasionally by a letter to a newspaper on a public topic or an interview granted to some roving reporter.

One example of his characteristic style is found in a letter written in October, 1921, regretting that age rendered inadvisable his attendance upon the Confederate reunion at Chattanooga. "It cannot be long," he wrote, "when we shall meet on this beautiful shore, and when I shall be sure the Bonnie Blue Flag will be flying at the fort and the bands will be playing 'Dixie' on parade, whilst the girls will be distributing 'The Chattanooga Rebel' to groups of ragged, red-nosed angels who have not forgotten the rebel yell."

BISHOP MORRISON DIES IN FLORIDA

Rev. Dr. Henry Clay Morrison, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and for a number of years superannuated, died at his home in Leesburg, Florida, according to word received by friends here. Bishop Morrison has been pastor of nearly every Methodist church in Louisville, and of many other churches in Kentucky.

Bishop Morrison was 85 years of age. He had lived in Leesburg, the home of his two sons for the last ten years, during five of which he had been on the superannuated list. In the later years of his life Bishop Morrison wrote a great deal. An autobiography was one volume and "The Simple Gospel" another.

Born in Tennessee, Bishop Morrison was brought up there and during the Civil War, after he had entered the ministry, he joined Gen. John Hunt Morgan's command and served as chaplain with the cavalrymen. Bishop Morrison's wife was Mrs. Mary Ray, of Marion county. Besides his widow, Bishop Morrison is survived by two sons, Horace and Dr. Harry Morrison, of Leesburg; a daughter, Mrs. James McClasky, of Boston, Ky., and a stepson, Eugene Ray.

PIERCY PROBABLY TRIED ON SATURDAY

Federal Officers To Finish With Him At Lexington Before He Is Returned Here

Examining trial of Lawrence Piercy, charged with abducting and trying to kill Peter W. Wells on the night of Dec. 2nd, will probably be held by County Judge W. K. Price Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

U. S. Commissioner Charles A. Wiard telephoned Wednesday night that he would bring Piercy over at once as he had promised, if the local officials desired it. He told Special Prosecutor A. K. Burnham that he would have to return Piercy to Lexington immediately after his trial here, however, in order to finish with the government cases against him there in connection with the distillery and other such offenses of which he is accused. It was then agreed that Piercy should be kept in Lexington until the federal officials are through with him on those cases. He will then be brought back to Richmond and have his examining trial and be kept in jail here unless he is able to furnish whatever bond that Judge Price may fix for his release pending circuit court action in February.

Following the trial of Keith Wednesday afternoon over the motive which prompted Piercy and his associates to endeavor to kill Mr. Wells continues keen on all sides. Keith declared when on the stand that Piercy did not tell him at any time "what it was all about." Keith declares he does not know what Piercy's motive was. He said that he went along with them because they had two quarts of moonshine. He told this to officers at the time he was arrested and not at his trial. Many believe, however, Keith has not told all he knows.

Mr. Wells continues to assert that he knows of no earthly reason why he should have been selected as the victim of such a murderous attack. Rumors that it was a subtle effort to obtain his property were branded by him as utterly worthless. He said that in the event of his death what ever property he might have would go to his mother, sister and brothers and in no way that he could imagine would any one benefit by having him killed.

Talk of a woman's jealousy, he said, was laughable. What woman, he asked, would benefit by having him killed? Even if some one was jealous of him he failed to see what could be accomplished by having him murdered.

Mr. Wells is inclined to the belief that Keith did not tell all he knows of the affair. He says he feels satisfied that Keith knew just the reason that Piercy was going to "bump him off."

Some believe that in the event of his conviction that Piercy may confess and tell the whole story but others are inclined to think that he will keep his mouth closed. Few believe that Piercy will even take the stand in his own defense when his trial is held, unless he thinks he can make someone else be the "goat."

In the federal examining trial at Lexington Piercy has been positively identified as the leader of the gang that robbed the Tyron distillery of a large amount of whisky. A dispatch from Lexington said about it: Lexington, Ky., Dec. 22.—Examining trial of Lawrence Piercy, former Lexington policeman; Andrew Settles, Covington machinist; W. J. Wilson, real estate dealer; H. C. Fain, truck driver; J. W. Draker, cafe owner; Thomas C. Barnes, cafe proprietor; and Walter Griffey, and H. V. Lowen, Anderson county farmers, charged with complicity in the raid on the T. B. Ripy distillery at Tyron December 8, was resumed this morning before United States Commissioner Charles N. Wiard, after having been adjourned from Tuesday afternoon.

L. E. Thinsley and Carl Cooper, guards at the distillery, positively identified Piercy and Settles as two of the men who kept them "covered" in the office while the distillery was being looted. Cooper was certain about Piercy and identified Settles by his "cock eye" the rest of his face having been concealed by a high coat

JUDGE PRICE TAKES STRONG STAND FOR MAJESTY OF THE LAW

In fixing the $15,000 bond for the release of Mickey Keith, who confessed to have been a member of the party headed by Lawrence Piercy that abducted and tried to kill Peter W. Wells, of this county, County Judge W. K. Price made a strong statement on the necessity of upholding the law, and the protection which is expected and deserved by every citizen from the law. His exact words were as follows:

"The law of the Commonwealth of Kentucky is made to demand what is right and prohibit what is wrong. The Constitution and the Statutes of Kentucky guarantee to every man, or every individual man and woman and every child in the Commonwealth of the State of Kentucky protection of life, limb, body, liberty and property. The laws are not made to punish those who violate the law so much as to protect the citizens of the Commonwealth."

"Evidently there has been a great violation of law; there has been a tragedy enacted in Madison county, that you don't read of very often in the Commonwealth of Kentucky. It is the duty of the officials, from the Governor of Kentucky down to the Constable, to enforce these laws for the protection of the citizens in these rights that I have just spoken of. There has not only been a violation of these rights, personal rights, upon Mr. Wells, but there has been a great crime committed against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. The crime that has been enacted here within our county is of a private, personal and general nature in this tragedy. It has not only been a wrong enforced upon individuals, but there has been a wrong committed against the Commonwealth, and, as I said, it is the duty of county officials and state officials, and local officials, and everybody—not only that, but of good citizens of this Commonwealth—to try to enforce these laws to prevent these tragedies and the enactment of these crimes."

"If such tragedies are allowed to be enacted in our Commonwealth, and in the borders of our county, no citizen is safe at home at night with his family, either he or his wife or his children, and it is our duty to try to protect them. That is what the laws are for, and what the officials are for."

Now, it seems like the testimony of Mr. Wells, and also from the testimony of this defendant, that while he might not have in every particular understood the objects of this trip it might be possible he was ignorant of the purpose for which these men came into Madison county from Fayette county, and might not have known these things, but still after these things were committed, it was his duty, if he didn't consider himself a party to it, to not have been his duty when he walked up the road there—knowing what these men were going to do, to have come to a farm house and let it be known that something had happened and try to prevent it, and we think this defendant ought to be held to answer to the Madison County Circuit Court in this case in the sum of $15,000 bond."

TO THE VOTERS OF MADISON COUNTY TOM BAXTER A GOOD SANTA CLAUS

Owing to the limited time before the election on Christmas eve for State Senator, it has been impossible for me to thoroughly canvass the district or county, and I, therefore, take this means of soliciting your support for that office.

I stand for the promotion of educational, business and social progress; for the building of more and better roads; for improvement of conditions of the farmer and laborer, those left adrift and suffering from the ravages of war, and of the State's industries; for a greater development of her resources; and for the enactment of laws to more successfully meet the changed conditions and evils with which we are confronted at this time of unrest and re-adjustment.

If the responsibility of representing you in Kentucky's next Senate shall be your favor placed upon me, I shall strive with all my efforts, brain and heart to prove true to the trust by following the guidance of right as I shall in my best judgment to me appear.

Born and reared among you, and having always made my home in Madison county, it has ever been my aim and endeavor to so work and live as to be worthy of the confidence and trust of those among whom I have lived, and to be prepared to serve their interests as the power within me may lie and as it is given me to understand and accomplish, if that opportunity shall be granted me by the vote of my countrymen. I, therefore, make my appeal to you, irrespective of party.

Respectfully Yours,

Washington, Dec. 22.—Investigation of the retail prices of food, fuel, shoes and clothing in all parts of the country was ordered today by Attorney General Daugherty. Daugherty said in many localities prices are too high and retailers' profits are "unconscionable," and that every effort would be made to put prices to their proper level. "There isn't a doubt in the world," said Daugherty, "that all our country retailers have an understanding."

TODAY IS SHORTEST DAY IN YEAR

Thursday, December 22, is the shortest day of the year and winter began at three o'clock 8 minutes in the morning when the sun enters the constellation of Capricorn or Horned Goat, according to Dr. Henry Meier, of Centre College, who is quoted by the Danville Messenger.

Today the sun rose at 6 o'clock 53 minutes and sets at 4 o'clock 24 minutes, standard or railroad time. According to sun time the sun rose at 7 hours 12 minutes 6 o'clock and sets at 4 hours 45 minutes 6 o'clock. At Richmond on the shortest day the sun will be nine hours 3 minutes above the horizon and on June 21st the longest day, the sun will shine for 14 hours 47 minutes.

Sun time changes from day to day, due to the irregular motion of the earth through space. On Thursday the sun is on the meridian at 21 minutes before noon, while on the 2nd of November it was on the meridian 37 minutes before noon standard time.

Sun time has the advantage that the time can fairly closely determine wherever the sun shines, and the Kentucky mountaineer, who stated before court, that at his place they used sun-time in preference to railroad time because they were nearer to the sun than the railroad, voiced considerable truth.

Dan J. Perry, 370 Quincy street well known Salt Lake City, Utah, business man, in reporting remarkable gains in weight both by himself and wife, says: "My wife gained 28 pounds and I gained ten pounds in a few weeks by taking Tanlac. She got no nourishment from her food and I don't believe she averaged three hours sleep out of the twenty-four."

"While my condition was not as serious as hers, I had been under the weather for some time, had no appetite and was bothered a good deal by indigestion. Tanlac has certainly proved all and more than is claimed for it with us."

Tanlac is sold in Richmond by Stockton and Son, and leading druggists.

Y. W. C. A. GIRLS PLAY SANTA CLAUS

Delightful Time Is Given 43 Kids dies At Sullivan Hall By Normal Girls

At three o'clock Monday afternoon Sullivan Hall ceased to be a girls' dormitory. It became Santa Claus' headquarters. The school truck was busy bringing the 43 little folk whom he was to reach through the assistance of the Y. W. C. A. girls.

A free will offering of $26.90 from the girls, generously supplemented by Mrs. T. J. Coates and the faculty, plus a lot of work, joyously thrown in, made this delightful experience a real Christmas for each child.

Mrs. Roberts and the girls removed caps, coats and mittens. Soon, under the leadership of Miss Dorothy Och, they were in the midst of games. Their merry laughter spoke for itself. Tired from playing, they sat in groups on the floor. It was just the time for a real Christmas story. But where was the story teller? Where was Miss Hanson? She was quickly found and eyes grew big and tender as she told very simply the story of the Christmas Gift. No one can stop with just one story. There must be another. This time it was "Santa Claus and Mrs. Santa Claus."

After singing a Christmas carol they were led to the dining room and were served plenty of ginger bread and milk.

Still Santa Claus had not come! Assembling in the hall before the closed library doors, they were told by Miss Roberts that they had phoned to see why Santa Claus had not come and that Mrs. Santa Claus said he had left the house and ought to be there by this time.

"How is he going to get in?" asked one boy.

"Oh, there is another chimney in this room," explained Miss Roberts.

Every one was waiting with ears alert. "I thought I heard him scratching," announced a boy. Another, a doubting Thomas, peeped through the keyhole. "He's here, I see him."

The doors were opened, and sure enough, there was Santa Claus himself. With a tree from the floor to the ceiling, all tinsel and candles and colored lights and loads of gifts for all.

Santa Claus had a time reading his list because he forgot his "specs." By and by the gifts were distributed. Each child had a box, and in each box were a glass locomotive full of candy, a striped candy cane, a boat of candy and nuts, a banana and an orange and an apple. Each boy had a ball and a harp while each girl had a doll and a strand of beads. As a final gift Santa Claus gave each child a nickel to get just what he pleased.

As one listened to the childish comments of delight one frequently heard similar remarks to this one, "Well, I'll keep my doll, but mother can have the rest for little sister." They, too, will know the joy of giving.

The faces of the Y. W. C. A. girls as they wrapped up their charges for the home trip plainly affirmed that "tis more blessed to give than to receive."

Santa Claus had brought an

MISS MILLER BEGINS HER WORK IN BURMA

Early in August Miss Malinda K. Miller, of Stanford, with many close relatives here, left the United States for Burma to become a missionary-teacher for the Baptists. She has evidently arrived there and begun her work for an Associated Press telegram from Rangoon tells of the arrival of an "American teacher" at Taunggyi and that the work will begin early in 1922. The A. P. dispatch will be read with interest.

Rangoon, Burma, Dec. 21—The missionary conference, which recently closed its 35th annual session here, presented statistics to show that there are now about 500,000 Christians in Burma, half of whom are Baptists.

Dr. Joseph C. Robbins, of New York, representing the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society of which he is foreign secretary for British India, in an address to the missionaries, discussed important problems and emphasized the advisability of new missionaries making a thorough study of the Burmese language, in order to better attain the viewpoint of the people with whom the work. The chief topic of the debate was the question of grants-in-aid, which the mission has been receiving from the British government for its educational work. Though many contended that the acceptance of these financial grants is a violation of the historical Baptist doctrine of the separation of church and state, the conference voted that present conditions in Burma justify the continuance of this policy. The "conscience clause" was another disputed question. Its adoption would mean that in all mission schools attendance at Bible study classes would be optional rather than compulsory.

The conference recommended the appointment of an educational secretary for Baptist schools in Burma. Another important action was the decision to establish at Insein a Burmese and Karen language school for new missionaries. At Taunggyi, a school is being established for the children of missionaries. An American teacher has already arrived and the institution is to open early in 1922.

The report for Judson College, Rangoon, showed that, in spite of the student strike, the total enrollment had increased since December 1920. During this time there has been a 25 per cent increase in the number of women students.

TEN TO ONE—WILD BILL'S GREATEST FIGHT

When the Overland stage route to the Colorado gold fields was established shortly before the Civil war, one of the bravest drivers in its employ was a young man from Illinois named James B. Hickok. In 1864 Hickok was taken off the stages and put in charge of the Rock Creek station, west of Topeka, Kan. In a region filled with gangs of outlaws and highway robbers. One of these, known as the McCallum gang, invited Hickok to join them and, upon his refusal, threatened to visit him some day and make him regret his defiance.

"You'll find me here any time you come," was Hickok's reply.

A few days later the McCallum gang did find him there. They attacked him in his dugout, battered down the door and Jim McCallum, the leader, sprang into the room. He was killed by a bullet from Hickok's rifle. Three more of the gang were shot down with a pistol before the other six drew their bowie knives and rushed upon him.

"Then I went wild," said Hickok in telling of the fight afterwards. He was severely wounded but terrible in his berserk rage, he came to grips with the outlaws, and when the fight was over eight of the ten were dead and the other two fled for their lives. Ever afterward Hickok was known as "Wild Bill."

Later Wild Bill enlisted in the Union army as a scout. He served with General Curtis in Arkansas and repeatedly entered the Confederate lines as a spy. More than once he was discovered and forced to flee, and more than once the fleetness and intelligence of his favorite horse, "Black Nell," saved his life. He was a sharpshooter at the Battle of Pea Ridge, where he distinguished himself by killing the Confederate general, McCullough.

After the war Bill returned to Kansas and became a scout for General Custer, who set a high value on his services and who once said: "Whether on foot or on horseback, Wild Bill was one of the most perfect types of physical manhood I have ever seen." From 1867 to 1870 Hickok served as marshal of Hays City and Abilene, Kan.

Electrical Cheer

Electrical Gifts at Christmas time, as on all other gift occasions, are not bauble or trinkets for a day. They are lasting gifts which carry electrical cheer throughout the years. Keen joy, real enthusiasm and gratitude will radiate from grown-ups when they receive something electrical as surely and as strongly as from the children who are given electrical toys. For the recipients, Electrical Gifts will give Christmas day an added meaning and increase happiness, comfort, and convenience every time they are used. Then give Electrical gifts for Christmas. They answer the question, "What Shall I Give?" most satisfactorily. There is something electrical for every member of the family at our store

SOME CHRISTMAS TIME FIRE DON'TS

(By Associated Press)
Louisville, Ky., Dec. 22.—One in every ten Christmas tree fires is a fatality, according to a report by Neuenschwander, Louisville's fire chief, who has issued a code of "don'ts" in the hope of lowering the record and of having a "fire-proof" Christmas here. The chief points out that the greatest danger is from the use of candles, and that the most dangerous time of the year is the night of the following precautions: Don't decorate your house with flammable trees, garlands and flimsy paper chains. Use non-combustible decorations. Don't use candles to decorate the Christmas tree, but use electric globes and remember that flimsy electrical apparatus often causes fires. Keep the trees away from heating and lighting fixtures. The safest method of illuminating a tree is to focus a spot light on it from some other point in the room. This gives a satisfactory effect. Don't leave the tree with the decorations standing for days after the holiday. Every day is another danger. The record show many Christmas tree fires in January. Don't smoke near Christmas trees. The instructions warn merchants to guard against smokers with lighted cigars or cigarettes getting too near the inflammable Christmas decorations on display counters. The usual warning about watching children and matches and keeping them widely separated also is incorporated in the warnings.

Blue Grass Show Holds Interest of Poultrymen
Louisville, Ky., Dec. 22.—With inquiries and entries being received from many Kentucky farmers and poultrymen as well as from those in other states, indications are that the first annual winter poultry show to be held here December 27 to 31, under auspices of the Blue Grass Poultry Association, will be an outstanding success, according to A. S. Chapin, poultry extension specialist of the College of Agriculture and president of the association. Many of the details and arrangements for the show have been completed, according to the announcement. Judges announced for the show in a catalog recently mailed to interested poultrymen include: W. Clayton Thomason, George town; Len Rawnsley, Louisville; A. W. Haller, Louisville, and J. R. Smyth, extension specialist in poultry from the college.

Wayne County Farmers Go After Scrub Sires

In an effort to rid the county of scrub sires, farmers in Wayne county, co-operating with County Agent H. J. Hayes and local farmers' organizations have set about to dispose of the last one before February 4, 1922, according to a recent report from the county. The movement was started at a recent meeting when a resolution was adopted endorsing the better sires-better stock campaign and urging farmers to dispose of their scrubs. A committee has been appointed to work with County Agent Hayes in carrying on the drive.

Girl With Rifle Leads Posse After Bank Bandits

Flora, Ill., Dec. 22.—Led by Mildred Kelly, pretty bookkeeper of the State Bank at Iuka, Ill., a posse of 300 armed men scoured the woods near here today in search of five bandits who late yesterday robbed the bank of between $15,000 and $20,000 in cash and Liberty bonds. Armed with a rifle, the girl led the possemen to all corners of the wooded strip. Miss Kelly was the first in pursuit of the bandits, following the robbery, in which she and other bank employees were ordered in the directors' room, while the bandits scooped up the money and bonds. As the bandits drove away, Miss Kelly grabbed a rifle hopped in her automobile, which was in front of the bank, and led the chase.

FIRST RURAL LIFE CONFERENCE IN STATE

(By Associated Press)
Lexington, Ky., Dec. 22.—A "Rural Life Conference," the first of its kind to be held in Kentucky in which the rural school, home, church, and community will be given special attention, is being planned in connection with the Tenth Annual Farm and Home Convention to be held at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, January 31 and February 1, 2, and 3.

Tentative plans are to have Mrs. M. L. Hall, Shelbyville, and superintendent of Shelby county schools, as general chairman of the conference, according to the announcement. She will be assisted by Miss Grace Colett, of Paint Lick, who will act as chairman of the home program; Rev. F. N. Tindler, North Middletown, chairman of the church program, and Father John Kune, McQuady, chairman of the community program.

Morning sessions during the farm and home convention will be devoted to the conference, the first morning having been set aside as day school, the second as home day, the third as church day and the fourth as community day. Prominent speakers are being listed for addresses relative to these various subjects and plans being made to supplement the speeches with short ten minute speeches by Kentuckians on their experiences with regard to home, school, church and community improvement.

The entire conference will be an organized effort to crystallize the efforts of various workers in the state who are coping with problems relative to the four subjects, according to C. W. Buckler, state leader of junior agricultural club work, who is in charge of this phase of the program. The conference will be an attempt to put the efforts of the various workers on an organized basis in order to bring about the greatest good for rural schools, home, churches, and communities of the state, he said.

The program is expected to have an appeal for a large group of workers, according to Mr.

The Christmas Store

A CHRISTMAS SONG

Down in the toe of every Christmas stocking, waiting to pop out with ruddy red apple and the odd shaped bundle (which one always finds in the toe of any Christmas stocking; you know) is a song. It is the song that came into the world to greet the Three Wise Men—the song Tiny Tim heard—the song you will hear too, if you put the inner ears of your heart in tune. For it is a Christmas song—its message is "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men." All the year it hums its rhythm into the warp and woof of living—but at Christmas time it exultantly flings its melody broadcast into the world. So, hidden away in the toe of your Christmas stocking there is this song. So, hold it fast—this lovable, beautiful, livable Christmas song!
